

More than 800,000 acres of federal public land were allocated by the BLM as available for oil shale and tar sands leasing. The Trust is leading a coalition of conservation groups in challenging this allocation and ensuring endangered species and other conservation values remain protected.